

The Impact of the railroads

How did the railroads change the West?

Impact on settlers and farming	Impact on the Plains Indians	Impact nationally	Impact on the cattle industry

Explain the importance of the railroads in the development of the West (8)

One reason the railroads were important in the development of the West was because it led to

A second reason the railroads were important in the development of the West was because it meant that

A final reason the railroads were important in the development of the West was because its consequences were